Born in 1995, Ebony loves the sound of music! She is an outgoing teenager who loves both dance and music. She's also a burgeoning writer and has a love for words and a gift for writing. Ebony has an interest in theater and a very expressive young lady with sensitivity for others. Ebony met with author and actor, Regina Louise who is currently in Los Angeles performing at the Zephyr Theater in Hollywood – her new play based on her own story as a former foster child.

Perhaps these two individuals have a connection so intimate and personal that only the two of them can inherently understand, but one element that rings out that we all can identify with is their need to be part of a family. To be "Somebody's Someone", which is the title of the play and book.

Ebony watched Regina perform a scene and got some personal acting lessons from a seasoned actor, writer and coach. Ebony was moved to tears in empathy as she read some of the lines from the script. With her own sense of self, she added her own personal flavor and personality to the lines and made it her own.

Inside the actor's studio, Ebony tells us that she's been in foster care for a while. Being an older teen in foster care, Ebony still has therapeutic connections from her past that she wants to maintain. It's part of who she is. Part of her story and would like a loving adoptive family who can support those connections and continue to nurture and encourage her already excellent academic achievements.

Ebony has a story to tell and wants to share each line with a family to call her own, and there are many chapters yet to be written. Stories hold so much more meaning when you have someone to tell them to. Tune into Wednesday's Child on the FOX 11 10pm News to hear her story. Give us a call if you have a heart for older teens if you want to be part of the upcoming chapters in Ebony's life book.
