Meet Jacob, an inquisitive kid born in 1998, as he whirls through an afternoon of exploration at the Aquarium of the Pacific in Long Beach, California. Learning is what Jacob likes to do and, armed with his book bag, Jacob set off to explore the wonders of the Aquarium.

Seeing the regular exhibits would've been enough for this little guy, but because he's so interested in learning new things he got a personal close-up look at a komodo dragon, a desert tortoise and the aquarium's debuting star – their porcupine.

Wednesday's Child will be Jacob's debut on television as well, so the two had a lot in common. This normally engaging young boy showed his shy side, but once he got used to all the attention his inquisitive side came out. Jacob loves to read about everything. His favorite subject is astronomy and he shared that he hopes to explore the universe someday as an astronaut.

Before the day was over, Jacob went back into the aquarium to do a treasure hunt and was excited about filling his booklet with all the secrets of the ocean. The one treasure we'd like to find for him is a permanent and loving family that will continue to nurture and encourage his interest in learning and his love for school.
