Meet Jacob, a kid born in 1996 and an aspiring hero. We met Jacob at the annual fund raiser for the Los Angeles City Fire Department and gave him a chance to suit up like the every day heroes he admires and hopes to be one, day.

Jacob is a typical kid. He loves cruising the neighborhood on his bike with his friends and has a sense of humor that will keep you laughing. No matter how much fun he's having, Jacob's always conscientious about school and gets home in time to do his homework and have dinner.

Jacob wants to be a hero and perhaps join the ranks of men and women who save lives everyday. Today, he got to suit up and wear all the gear firefighters do. He's got a lot of growing up and developing physically to do before he can run in all that gear. For now, Jacob is content playing with his action figures and dreaming about the day he's big enough to help people and truly save lives.

For an afternoon, Jacob was part of the LAFD family. We'd like this youngster to be part of a permanent family. Jacob wants to be a hero when he grows up. Our message to that special family with a heart for older children is that there is more than one way to be a hero. Our heroes are adoptive families.
