A self described fashionista, we caught up 17 year old Sasha during the Mercedes Benz Fashion Week in Los Angeles. Sasha arrived on the red carpet in style in a chauffeured Mercedes Benz Blu-Tec SUV, courtesy of Mercedes Benz USA.

Prior to sitting down in her front row seat for the Viridis Luxe Collection, Sasha got to meet with designers before the show to point out her favorites – a privilege reserved for VIPs only. Sasha was also introduced to a new “green” clothing line designed with protecting the environment in mind.

Although Sasha has a love for clothes and everything fashion as well as an interest in protecting the environment, Sasha's dream is to “serve and protect” by being a police officer someday. With the height and beauty of a model, she could no doubt be the most fashion-forward police officer protecting our communities in the near future.

Sasha has her eyes set on college following high school and with her follow-through personality, she'll do whatever it takes to make her dreams come true. One piece still missing from the picture of Sasha's future is a loving adoptive family to support and encourage her as she travels along the runways and highways of life.

Sasha wants to maintain connections with people who are already important in her life while also looking to make new ties. While Sasha sits down and enjoys a preview of the 2009 Spring Collection of Viridis Luxe, please join the show by tuning in Wednesday's Child on the FOX 11 10pm News. You may just feel the pull to become a stitch in the fabric of Sasha's future.
